BUSINESS METHODS OF THE MONARCHY.

The STAR has obtained a type-written copy of the report of expert J. A. Low to the Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly of 1892 upon the way the public business was carried on under the monarchy. Mr. Low stated that upon entering upon the discharge of his duties he proceeded to examine and audit each set of books as closely as circumstances would allow. His report covered fifty pages and 15,000 words-a length which precludes the idea of quoting it line for line and permits but the publication of extracts. These, however, will testify to the general results of the investigation.

Said Mr. Low:

"I wish to explicitly state that I cannot vouch for the correctness of any one set of books of any department of the numerous bureaus I have already visited.

Department) with their report and can Rent P. O. Boxes say if there are proper vouchers for the entries and transfers as made, the said books are in order and hence the balances shown would be correct for the past period." Mr. Low, however, did not count the cash and his "if" is particularly significant.

In the Interior Department Mr. Low found "a complete record in detail of all disbursements by the several but reaus under the executive, but no off-sets whatever, such as the receipts from sets whatever, such as the receipts from the Honolulo Water Works, Govern ment Electric Lights, Honolulu Market. Hilo Water Works, Koloa Water Works, Honolulu Wharves and Landings, Government Tug and Rentals from the leases of land on the Esplanade for storage purposes.

The expert recommended that all moneys be paid direct to the Interior February 16, 1891. - Paid expenses of Department so as to reduce the po sibilities of fraud-some of the bureaus, as he pointed out, being then without special check or oversight, though handling large sums quarterly.

In the Government Electric Light Department, the expert found the fol lowing balances unpaid-a state of things highly indicative of Royal favor

Under the caption "Road Supervisor, Honolulu" the expert wrote. "In looking up the cost of the Waikiki Seawall, I find the total cost of this work to be $16,959.79, and the amount ex pended as per vouchers to be $16,-439.13 or an excess of the figures as reported, of $520.66."

Query-Where did that $520.66 go? In the Postal Bureau the expert found that "the books, as to efficiency, are in perfect order, but the balances of the accounts are contrary to the first principles of bookkeeping and should be corrected."

Query-Were the books "fixed?"

Mr. Low turned next to the Postal Savings Bank Department, and after speaking of the "efficient" bookkeeping went on to say: "My attention has been called to supposed acts of fraud recently perpetrated in this department, and as the rules for secresy of the Postal Savings Bank are such that the names of depositors or amounts of deposits and withdrawals shall not be disclosed by the officers of the Postal Savings Bank, I note the cir cumstances separately." "The system as practiced in the Custom House is illegal," continued Mr. Low, "and too open, and destroys the principle of the plan, i.e. for every dollar received a corresponding blank must be on file."

In the storekeeper's department the system of keeping the books was found to be "not so arranged as to allow the executive to have a complete check upon the monies taken in." Fraud, he declared, could be readily carried out by collesion between the store keeper and the merchants doing business with his office.

Going into the Attorney-General's field of operations, the expert found a singular condition of affairs. We quote
